Joke on a General.

Apropos of Gen. Faidherbe, an amusing anecdote is related of an adventure which befell him when he commanded the Army of the North in the war of 1870. His charger, a splendid gray Arab, had been wounded at the battle of Pont Noyelles, and the general was obliged to leave it behind him at a farm. Some days after, as Gen. Faidherbe was at lunch, a nonommissioned officer of the Prusslan army came up with a French dragoon and a horse which Gen. Von Goben had sent him with a polite message, believing it to be his property. The horse was a miserable that he had been taken prisoner with three comrades by a patrol of German cavalry two days before and that he had hit on the bright idea of representing himself as the orderly and his horse as the favorite charger of Gen. THE USE OF TOBACCO. A Marked Change Taking Place in the

Every tobacconist recognizes the great change that is taking place in what may be called in a rather new sense the public taste. Any average tobacconist, whose trade is not chiefly among sailors and truckmen, will tell you he does not sell one-half as much chewing tobacco as he did ten years ago, and not one third as much as he did twenty years ago. Very likely he will be unable to guess why it is, but he can't deny the fact. I asked one of them about it the other day. He said: "The change is due to a variety of causes. It is a great deal more apparent here in the east than in the west and south, but it is going on all over the country. One thing is undoubtedly the strength of public opinion that it is an uncleanly habit. It is hard for a man who chews to keep evidences of it from his property. The horse was a miserable animal, and Gen. Faidherbe, amazed at the apparition, asked the dragoon for an explanation. The man related that the habit should go down before the increasing attention to dress, that is a feature of modern life. Then a great many refined and well intentioned persons have waged war against it for years. It was inevitable that some effect should

"But the principal causes are right here: There is a great deal more dyspepsia and stomach trouble in the country now than there used to be. And no per-son can chew tobacco who has a weak stomach. James Parton says in his famous pamphlet against rum and toreturn crestitates at the limited of increase. Gen. Von Goben, as soon as he learnt the truth, directed that diligent search should be made for the Arab, but it had been so carefully hidden away that he never succeeded in restoring it to his experience shows that he is wrong, and therefore he doesn't know. Common experience shows that he is wrong, and doctors support the vehict of common experience. The action of the tobacco juice, which trickles down the chewer's throat, is to paralyze the stomneh. It will do that long before smoke will have any perceptible effect upon an ordinary pair of lungs.

"Then the cigarette has done a great deal to put an end to the habit of chew-ing tobacco. The growth of the cigarette practice in this country is, as they say of western towns, 'phenomenal.' The con-sumption of cigarettes has doubled many times over in the last fifteen years. About seven out of every ten boys who are growing up now smoke cigarettes. And after a boy has smoked cigarettes a few years he not enly has no taste for tobacco in any other form, but he has no constitu-tion left to stand chewing tobacco. It is curious how boys will take to cigarettes I believe it is very largely because of the fuss that is made about them. It has got to be the common opinion that cigarette smoking is the most injurious practice known. That is just why boys adopt it. It makes them an object of awful interest to other boys and to girls. It is soothing to a boy's foolish pride to know that peo-ple have marked him out as one who is rushing with frightful temerity to early or Morphine, but gives the child natural destruction. Whether that is the cause case from pain. Price 25 cents. Sold by of it or not, it is perfectly certain that more and more cigarettes are being sold every year and less and less chewing to-bacco." - ! cw York Commercial Adver-

Tribes of Terriers

To many it will be a novelty to flad that Wales and !reland both produce a dis-tinct race of !erriers, which present, however, no striking points of difference with the wiry Scotch.
